New entry and quarantine requirements in Canada

Before passenger flies with us to Canada, we want to make sure all passengers are aware of the new entry and quarantine requirements imposed by the Government of Canada that will affect their arrival.

Effective February 22, 2021 at 12:00am EST, in addition to providing a negative pre-departure COVID-19 test, all passengers arriving in Canada must take two COVID-19 molecular tests — one on arrival at the airport and one as part of an at-home test kit to be completed later in the quarantine period.

Before traveling to Canada, passengers must also book and pay for a three-night stay in a government-authorized accommodation where they will remain until receiving the results from their first test. The list of government authorized accommodations is available at Government of Canada's travel advice site.

If the passengers are connecting to another destination within Canada, note that they must take their test on arrival and complete the mandatory hotel stay at their first point of entry into Canada. If they receive a negative test result, they can continue to their final destination within Canada and complete the remainder of their quarantine there. If the results of the first test are positive, the passenger will be moved to a federal designated quarantine facility to complete the balance of their quarantine.

If they are connecting to an onward international destination, they are exempt from this requirement, as long as they remain in the secure terminal area.

Only certain travelers will be exempt from the arrival testing and mandatory hotel stay. For official details, please visit the Government of Canada's travel assistance site.

If the passengers would like to rebook their travel to arrive in Canada on or before February 21, please contact the travel agent or Air Canada for booking assistance.

SALES BULLETIN

Here's what passenger needs to know

Before their flight to Canada

1. Rebook passenger's connecting flight.

Since passengers will need to quarantine at their first point of entry, they will need to re-book their connecting flight. Please contact the travel agent or Air Canada for booking assistance.

Note: If their connecting flight is not rebooked prior to their departure, Air Canada will cancel their connecting flight.

2. Have passenger download the free ArriveCAN mobile app.

ArriveCAN must be used prior to their arrival in Canada to provide mandatory contact details and quarantine plan information.

3. Passengers must take a COVID-19 test 72 hours prior to the departure of their flight.

For full details, visit the Government of Canada site.

4. Passengers must reserve their room at a government-authorized accommodation for three nights.

There will be a number of hotels to choose from, located near each of the four international airports in Vancouver, Calgary, Toronto and Montreal. Passengers can go to travel.gc.ca on how to book their hotel. Information on hotel bookings is available at Government of Canada's travel advice site.

At arrival in Canada

Passengers will need to:

1. Complete their COVID-19 test at the airport.

2. Proceed immediately from the airport to their reserved government authorized accommodation.

They must stay at the hotel for three nights or until they receive their test result. They are responsible for their own transportation but are restricted to certain types, such as their own vehicle or hotel shuttle. They cannot use public transportation, a taxi, a ridesharing service, or be picked up by any other person.

SALES BULLETIN

3. Receive the results from their COVID-19 test and take action accordingly.

If result is negative: they will be able to proceed to their place of quarantine to complete the remainder of the 14-day requirement. This includes taking a flight to their final destination in Canada if applicable. If they were connecting to another destination within Canada and receive a negative test result sooner than 3 days, they may be rebooked on the next available flight - please contact the travel agent or Air Canada for booking assistance.

If result is positive: they will be transferred to a federal designated quarantine facility to complete the remainder of their mandatory 14-day quarantine. If they were connecting to another destination within Canada, they must rearrange their flight plans - Please contact the travel agent or Air Canada for booking assistance.

4. Complete the remainder of their mandatory 14-day quarantine and complete their test kit as instructed later in their quarantine.

Note that policies and requirements change frequently, and it remains passenger's responsibility to ensure that they are in compliance. We therefore strongly encourage them to visit the relevant government websites for the latest requirements as Air Canada is not responsible for how these requirements are applied by the governments. Passengers can visit the Government of Canada at travel.gc.ca for more information or their frequently asked questions page. For specific questions related to the implementation of the government policy, please contact the government or Canadian Consular Services.

We also invite all passengers to visit the Air Canada COVID-19 Hub for more details.

As always, we remain committed to providing our mutual customers with a safe and comfortable journey.
